the precious pack

editor's notes

"Portraits of the pack" archives three years of creative experimentation with portrait photography. Some of these images capture the purest and rawest form of finding joy in trial and error. It feels embarrassing to compile these into a photobook because I really had no idea what I was doing.

Looking back at them now, I cringe at my color choices and composition, some of these don't even look presentable. But, I guess that's the beauty of growth. These clumsy attempts weren't a waste of time. Rather, they were the foundation necessary to sharpen my eye and find my voice. I can only embrace where I started to appreciate where it landed.

Behind every frame, there is a community.

I want to express my deepest gratitude to my friends who are always down to participate in my creative pursuit. You all mean the world to me. A part of you shapes a small part of me; therefore, you are forever woven into everything I create.

with love,
